Additional Data: Podcast, Group/Individual Activity

Research Questions:

- Does listening to podcasts make an activity more enjoyable?
- During what kind of activities do people tend to listen to podcasts the most?
- Does listening to a podcast affect the amount of time one spends on an activity?
- Are activities more enjoyable when other people are present? (Group activity)
- In what kind of activities do people prefer to have other people present?
- Does having other people present affect the amount of time one spends on an activity?

These research questions can utilise time diary data along with data on whether the individual was listening to a podcast or not during an activity, and whether the activity was performed with other people present.

Answering these questions can provide insights into how beneficial podcasts and working in a group are when it comes to enjoying an activity more, and whether you are more likely to engage in an activity for a longer period of time (boosting productivity) given either of the two.
